

A GIFT, NOT A LECTURE

Choose Yourself Again

The starter kit: five boundaries you're allowed to have, five red flags finally decoded, and seven pocket hugs for the hard moments.

THE LOVING ON ME COLLECTIVE

BEFORE ANYTHING ELSE

Hey beautiful.

If this landed in your hands, some part of you is done abandoning herself to keep other people comfortable. That part of you is the one we're talking to — the one who's healing from a relationship that hurt, a season that drained her, or a pattern she's finally ready to name.

This little kit isn't homework. Read it in five minutes or keep it on your phone for the hard nights. Either way, it works the same: by reminding you of what you already know.

> "You are not difficult to love. You were asking the wrong people to love you correctly."

"Today, I promise not to abandon myself just to keep someone else comfortable."

THE DAILY PROMISE — SAY IT ONCE, OUT LOUD, EVERY MORNING

Three more words for your pocket: Consistency is the minimum, not a reward you have to earn. · Closure is not something they give you. It is something you decide. · You are not starting over. You are starting again with experience.

PART ONE

Five boundaries you're allowed to have

A boundary is not a punishment for them. It's a promise to you. Borrow these word-for-word until your own come naturally.

WITH AN EX

"If they text me, I will wait 24 hours and check my reasons before replying — if I reply at all."

Re-entry into your life should require repair, not just reappearance.

WITH FAMILY

"I can love my family and still leave the room when the conversation turns disrespectful."

Love and limits are allowed to exist in the same sentence.

WITH FRIENDS

"I will not be the only one reaching out. Effort has to flow both ways."

You are allowed to notice who only calls when they need something.

AT WORK

"I will take my breaks and my time off without apologizing for them."

Rest is part of the job of being a person.

WITH YOURSELF

"I will not talk to myself in a tone I would never use with someone I love."

The longest relationship of your life deserves your kindest voice.

PART TWO

Five red flags, finally decoded

These are common patterns, not diagnoses of any one person. Only you know the full context of your situation — but naming a pattern is how it stops confusing you.

Love bombing

Intense attention, constant messages, and soulmate talk very early — before they truly know you.

Real love can afford to move slowly. Rushing is a signal, not a romance.

Hot and cold

All-in one week, distant the next. The unpredictability keeps you anxious and grateful for crumbs.

Consistency is the minimum, not a reward you have to earn.

Gaslighting

"That never happened." "You're imagining things." Your memory becomes the thing on trial.

Your perception is allowed to exist even when it is inconvenient for someone else.

The non-apology

"I'm sorry you feel that way." Apologies that protect their image and reassign the fault to you.

Repair sounds like changed behavior, not rehearsed words.

Guilt trips

"After all I've done for you." Your no gets punished instead of respected.

Guilt is not proof you did something wrong. Sometimes it is proof you did something new.

PART THREE

Seven pocket hugs — one for each day

Small warm notes for heavy moments. Read the day's hug like it was written for you, because it was.

MONDAY	You made it through today. That is not nothing. That is everything.
TUESDAY	Deep breath. Shoulders down. Unclench your jaw. You are safe in this moment.
WEDNESDAY	You are allowed to take up space, sis. All of it.
THURSDAY	The right people will not make you beg. Rest until they arrive.
FRIDAY	Your softness survived. After everything, it survived. Protect it.
SATURDAY	You do not have to earn rest. You are a person, not a performance.
SUNDAY	The little girl you used to be is proud of the woman reading this.

WHEN YOU WANT MORE THAN A PAGE

The Collective walks with you

This kit is a taste of two bigger companions, built with the same heart:

The Loving On Me Daily Companion

Your private daily space: mood check-ins that answer back, a personalized plan every day, the full 47-pattern Red Flag Decoder, a boundary builder, pocket hugs on demand, and a healing journey with seasons. Everything stays on your device — nobody reads it but you.

$17 · ONE-TIME · AVAILABLE NOW

The Loving On Me Healing Plan

Seven gentle questions reveal which healing season you're in — then the 7-Day Healing Reset walks you through one week of small, doable steps that fit exactly where you are.

$9 · COMING SOON

The Daily Companion is ready for you right now at The Loving On Me Collective — the link that brought you this kit. The Healing Plan is next, and you'll be among the first to know.

The Loving On Me Collective provides encouragement and educational support. It is not a replacement for professional mental health, medical, legal, or emergency services. If you are in crisis right now, call or text 988 (Suicide & Crisis Lifeline) or text HOME to 741741 (Crisis Text Line) — free, confidential, 24/7. If you are in immediate danger, call 911.